

George Mansho Vice President of Business Development for the CDMA

George Mansho is Vice President of Business Development for the CDMA Development Group ( CDG) joining the CDG in January of 2005. CDG is an international consortium of companies who have joined together to lead the adoption and evolution of CDMA wireless systems around the world based in Costa Mesa California. The CDG is comprised of the world's leading CDMA service providers and manufacturers. By working together, the members help to ensure interoperability among systems, while expediting the availability of CDMA technology to consumers. Prior to joining the CDG, Mr Mansho held several senior management positions with Qualcomm Inc., a Fortune 500 leader of digital wireless communications products and services based in San Diego California. Most recently he served as Senior Vice President, Business Development of Qualcomm's CDMA Technology(QCT) group, a 4 billion dollar semiconductor company supplying chip sets and software products for both the CDMA and WCDMA markets. Mr Mansho also served as Corporate Senior Vice President for Global Business Development focused on mergers and acquisitions, strategic alliances and investments. Mr. Mansho was also General Manager of Qualcomm's Omnitrac international business providing 2 way data messaging service for the commercial transportation market with operations in Europe, Latin America and Asia. Mr. Mansho joined Qualcomm in 1994 where he was part of the technology transfer team involved in marketing, negotiating and licensing Qualcomm's Code Division Multiple Access (CDMA ) technologies to global manufacturers to manufacture and sell CDMA equipment. Prior to joining Qualcomm Inc. Mr. Mansho held management and legal positions with Ball Corporation, a Fortune 500 packaging and aerospace company based in Broomfield Colorado. Mr. Mansho holds a Bachelor of Arts and Sciences degree as well as a Juris Doctorate degree from the University of Colorado, Boulder Colorado. He is also licensed to practice law in the state of Colorado and the 10th Federal Circuit Court.