

Ismael Fikree is chief Technology Officer (CTO) of MTC-Vodafone in Bahrain. Ismael has joined the company in June 2003 after 15year career with Bahrain Telecommunications Company (incumbent). In his current position, at MTC-Vodafone, he shares responsibilities for the company's overall technology direction as well as provides technical development training. He is responsible for defining and implementing the plans, policies, processes and resources for achieving MTC-Vodafone's strategic technology vision. His top initiatives are developing investment strategies, establishing and maintaining a highly skilled work force, promoting technical excellence. Leveraging intellectual capital and building strategic technical alliances. Throughout his experience, he managed to rollout a complete mobile network with various technologies (2G/GPRS/EDGE/3G) in a period of 5 months in the Kingdom of Bahrain. He has also conducted many world-wide presentations on telecom technologies and mobile business in Middle East, Europe and Far East. Mr. Fikree has, over his career, is a professional membership in Committee for Organizing Engineering Professional Practice (COEPP). He attended many high executive management training in Europe (PA Consultant in UK: Developing and Implementing Business Strategies) and USA part of Harvard Business School.

